

The Role of Religion in a Presidential Election

Thursday, October 11th

6:00pm-7:15pm

Founders Multipurpose Room 125/126

Religion is a key variable in the selection of modern presidents. The rise of the evangelical Right and the push back by seculars and religious progressives have pushed religion to the forefront of U.S. politics. This session will feature experts on the intersection of religion and politics and will explore how the faith factor may be one of the most important factors to the outcome of this year's presidential campaign.

Featuring

John Farina

Associate Professor,
Religious Studies, George
Mason University

Mark J. Rozell

Professor of Public Policy,
George Mason University

Greg Smith

Senior Researcher, Pew
Research Center's Forum on Religion & Public Life

LIVING • LEARNING • LEADING

Pizza & Perspectives

FREE Pizza and Soda provided by University Life!